

My value statement:

I am driven by the people I love, the goals I set, and the difference I hope to make. Family keeps me grounded, ambition pushes me to grow, and impact gives purpose to everything I do, while kindness and personal power shape how I show up for myself and others.

My Leadership Point of View:

To lead with kindness, inclusiveness and passion by creating an environment where every voice is valued, respect is shown even in difficult times and collaboration helps us grow stronger together.

Reflection:

Being a Newton Fellow has been one of the most impactful and meaningful experiences of my time at CU Boulder. What I thought would simply be a chance to build leadership skills became an experience that challenged me to grow, pushed me to think bigger, and connected me with incredible people who inspired me in so many ways. Hearing the stories and perspectives of others reminded me how powerful it is to truly listen, learn, and create spaces where people feel valued. Through the workshops, events, and conversations I had, I gained confidence, perspective, and a stronger sense of purpose. More than anything, this experience showed me that leadership does not have one look or one style. A true leader is someone who can call forward whatever qualities are needed in the moment to guide, support, and create impact.
